40 Under 40: Washington Business Journal Recognizes Ian Thomas

February 1, 2024

Offit Kurman is proud to announce that Ian Thomas, a principal attorney in the firm's Commercial Litigation Practice Group, has been named to the Washington Business Journal's "40 Under 40" list. This annual award honors 40 of Greater Washington's top young professionals for their exceptional contributions and leadership in the business community.

Ian Thomas is recognized for his unwavering commitment to client success and his innovative approach to complex litigation. He is a key player in the firm's Commercial Litigation Practice Group, where he leads business-to-business disputes, government enforcement actions, and a broad spectrum of other legal matters. Ian is widely regarded for his litigation experience across multiple jurisdictions and his track record in both trial and appellate advocacy. His work includes handling cases involving real estate disputes, consumer protection claims, employee mobility issues, and trade secrets, particularly in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Beyond his litigation practice, Ian has developed a growing reputation in the gaming industry. His clients include startups, operators, and other businesses in the e-sports, sports wagering, and iGaming fields. Leveraging his litigation and regulatory experience, Ian provides guidance on governance, compliance, licensing, and other regulatory issues. He is a frequent contributor to industry publications and a speaker at gaming conferences, where he offers insights on legislative changes and legal developments in the gaming sector.
