

Adapting to the Evolving Marijuana Legislation

January 6, 2026

By Russell B. Berger and Sarah M. Sawyer

In this episode of OK at Work, Sarah Sawyer and Russell Berger from Offit Kurman discuss the recent federal reclassification of marijuana and what it means for employers. They explore how these changes impact business policies, particularly in states where marijuana is legal for medical or recreational use. The conversation explores the differences in handling marijuana compared to other substances like alcohol and prescription drugs, and addresses the complexities of navigating state and federal regulations.