Christine Saraceno works with the attorneys in the firm's Toxic Torts and Asbestos practice group. The asbestos group serves as national counsel for asbestos litigation for a Fortune 500 multinational engineering and construction firm. Christine regularly manages several jurisdictions, most of which are high-volume, in addition to assisting in drafting discovery responses and conducting research. She also assists attorneys in other departments as needed with a variety of projects and trial preparation.

With over 35 years of experience in defense litigation, catastrophic construction, labor law, and medical and insurance recovery, Christine is well-equipped to handle complex legal matters.
