Attorney

lilah.cook@offitkurman.com

Los Angeles, CA – 213.341.1333

Lilah N. Cook represents businesses, designers, contractors, and high-net-worth individuals in a wide range of complex civil litigation matters. Her practice includes disputes involving business, construction, design, real estate, and products liability claims in both state and federal courts throughout California.

Drawing on experience across a variety of industries and circumstances, Lilah develops practical litigation strategies tailored to each client's objectives. She has handled matters involving athletes, public figures, and other clients whose cases have attracted significant public attention, requiring thoughtful legal advocacy and a strategic approach at every stage of the litigation process.

Lilah prioritizes strong client relationships and clear communication, recognizing that litigation often arises in challenging, high-pressure situations. She is equally committed to professionalism and civility in the practice of law, working constructively with opposing counsel to help resolve disputes on their merits whenever possible.

Outside of her practice, Lilah enjoys mentoring law students and speaking on panels at her law school. She also enjoys traveling, reading, working out, following Penn State athletics and the San Diego Padres, and spending time with family and friends.
