

Myth or Reality of Ironclad Contracts

July 21, 2026

By Sarah M. Sawyer and Russell B. Berger

Attorneys Sarah Sawyer and Russell Burger of Offit Kurman discuss the idea of the “ironclad contract” and why truly loophole-proof, unbreakable agreements don’t exist. They explain that while contracts can be sloppy or well-prepared, even strong drafting can’t anticipate every unexpected real-life scenario. The episode emphasizes focusing on common contingencies and high-impact issues, treating contracts as adaptable documents that evolve as circumstances and business needs change.
