Offit Kurman Continues Expansion in Atlanta Office with the Addition of Attorneys Peter Spanos and Richard Rimer, Jr.

August 4, 2025

Am Law 200 firm Offit Kurman announces today its further expansion into Atlanta, GA with the addition of two new attorneys Peter Spanos, a nationally recognized labor and employment attorney, and Richard Rimer, Jr., a seasoned trademark and intellectual property lawyer. Their arrival broadens the firm's service offerings in the Southeast and reinforces its commitment to meeting the evolving legal needs of the region's business community.

"Offit Kurman continues to grow by attracting attorneys who combine deep experience with a strong client-first approach," added Tim Lynch, President of Offit Kurman. "Peter and Richard exemplify the kind of practical, business-minded counsel our clients value. We're excited to see the impact they will make in Atlanta and beyond."

Peter Spanos brings decades of experience representing employers in complex workplace matters, including litigation, regulatory compliance, and labor relations. His clients span industries such as healthcare, manufacturing, real estate, transportation, and nonprofit sectors.

Richard Rimer, Jr., advises entrepreneurs, family-owned businesses, and growing companies on trademark protection and brand strategy. With a business-owner's perspective and deep knowledge of intellectual property law, he helps clients secure and leverage their most valuable assets: their names, logos, and reputations.

"We are thrilled to welcome Peter and Richard to our Atlanta team," said Joe English, Principal and Founder of Offit Kurman's Atlanta office. "Each brings exceptional legal skill, practical insight, and a shared commitment to client service. Their addition strengthens our ability to support businesses throughout the region, whether they are navigating employment challenges or building long-term brand value."
