

OK at Work: Employment Outlook and COVID 19 for 2022

January 5, 2022

By Sarah M. Sawyer and Russell B. Berger

As employees get back to work after the holidays, COVID-19 is continuing to be a consistent disrupter to business operations. With state, local, and CDC guidance changing rapidly with the emergence of the Omicron variant and large volumes of employees testing positive for the virus, employers are back to making tough choices regarding how to keep their employees safe and manage absences while maintaining operations. Check out this week's OK at Work for an update on what employers should consider as they adapt to the most recent pandemic conditions.