

OK at Work: The New CDC Guidance and How it Impacts the Workplace

August 3, 2021

By Russell B. Berger and Sarah M. Sawyer

The CDC has issued new guidance to maximize protection from the COVID-19 Delta variant, recommending that fully-vaccinated individuals should wear a mask indoors in public if they are in an area of substantial or high transmission. On this week's episode of OK at Work, Russell Berger and Sarah Sawyer discuss the impact that this new guidance will have on employers who had already adapted to the previous guidance stating that fully-vaccinated individuals need not wear masks indoors. This leads to the question – what policies should employers now be implementing in the workplace? Listen in as Russell Berger and Sarah Sawyer discuss.
