When disaster strikes, the strength and resilience of a community often shine through the actions of those determined to help. Isabel Conrath, an associate in Offit Kurman's Estates and Trusts West Practice Group, has exemplified this spirit by stepping forward to assist victims of the devastating Palisades and Eaton fires.

Isabel, a graduate of Pepperdine University Caruso School of Law, was deeply involved in the school's Clinical Education Program. Her ongoing commitment to serving others drove her to volunteer with Pepperdine's Disaster Relief Clinic in Malibu, supporting wildfire victims with the legal challenges they face in the wake of such tragedy.

"When the devastating Palisades and Eaton fires broke out earlier this month, I knew that I wanted to use my role as an attorney to help those impacted in any way possible," Isabel shared. "This work included listening to their stories and helping them navigate insurance claims and secure disaster relief benefits."

Her efforts have provided more than just legal assistance; they have also offered hope and comfort to individuals facing unimaginable losses. For Isabel, the most rewarding aspect of this work has been witnessing the resilience of the wildfire victims and the strength of the community coming together in times of need.

"Seeing the difference a small piece of my time can make—hopefully restoring some small sense of hope—is exactly why I chose to become an attorney," Isabel reflected.

While the work has been fulfilling, it is not without its challenges. Isabel admits that witnessing the emotional and financial toll on members of her community has been heartbreaking. "This is especially difficult to witness knowing that I am unable to alleviate many of the concerns they have in that moment," she said.

To those affected by the wildfires, Isabel offers a heartfelt message of compassion and solidarity: "I want to express my deepest sympathy for the hardships caused by the recent wildfires. The physical and emotional toll of losing so much, so quickly, is unimaginable. Please know that your community is here for you, and Los Angeles County will rebuild!"
