

Time to Care Act

July 13, 2022

By Sarah M. Sawyer

The Time to Care Act has passed, and beginning on January 1, 2025, most Maryland employees can apply for paid leave from a state fund. Fortunately, while this law took effect June 1, 2022, it isn't functional until October 1, 2023, when employee and employer contributions start, and employees will not be eligible to take leave until January 1, 2025-allowing employers time to prepare. Essentially, employees who worked at least 680 hours over the 12 months immediately preceding the date on which leave is to begin are entitled to 12 weeks of paid leave for health and caretaking reasons.

This leave can run concurrently with FMLA leave and, in many cases, essentially makes FMLA paid leave. That said, for employers who do not fall under the FMLA, it is important to note that the Time to Care Act does contain job protection similar to FMLA.

While employers should start to consider next steps related to implementing new leave laws, they have some lead time. While employees won't be eligible to take leave until 2025, employers should start communicating with employees about the new law next year since they will see contributions to the fund deducted from their paychecks beginning October 1, 2023. There are also a few unanswered questions based on how the law is drafted that I expect we will get answers to over the next 12-18 months.

Employee and employer contributions will start on October 1, 2023.

Employees can start taking leave on January 1, 2025.

Employees who worked at least 680 hours over the 12 months immediately preceding the date on which leave is to begin are entitled to 12 weeks of paid leave for health and caretaking reasons, which will be paid out of the state fund.
